Flint Public Library Long Range Plan 2012-2016

Introduction and Acknowledgements

The Flint Public Library is a much-loved institution and respected as the heart of the Middleton community. For over 120 years it has served the many needs of the public thanks to the vision and dedication of Middleton residents throughout the years. This support continues today. We would like to thank the following people for their willingness to take time to thoughtfully explore the Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats to the library and create a forward thinking long range plan to meet the needs of the Middleton community over the next 5 years.

We thank the following people for their support.

Brief History of the Town of Middleton

Middleton, incorporated as a Town in 1728, is located in northeastern Massachusetts and is bordered by Danvers on the east, Topsfield, Boxford and North Andover on the north, North Reading on the west and Peabody on the south. It is 23 miles from Boston and covers an area of approximately fourteen square miles. Routes 114 and 62 cross one another in the center of Town. Middleton was so named because it was a “Middle Town” located halfway between the larger towns of Andover and Salem. In 1753 when the Estey Tavern was built it was used as a stopover point for travelers or drovers. A holding area for sheep, cows and horses was created across the street from the tavern and a large watering trough was located in the center of town for animals and people.

Before being called Middleton, the area was known as Will’s Hill after a lone elderly Native American named Will. The town has a celebration known as Chief Will’s Day in honor of this first settler of Middleton each year. In 1651 the first European, William Nichols settled in Middleton. In 1653 Thomas Fuller a blacksmith built a saw mill on a stream in Middleton. Then in 1659 Bray Wilkins settled near Middleton Pond with his six sons and a family friend named John Gringell. Soon other families, the Putnams, Hobbs, Elliots, Townes, Richardsons and Peabodys were settling in the area as well.

In 1729, Rev. Andrew Peters, a Harvard graduate, was ordained as the first minister in the first church built in Middleton. The church also served as a meeting house and school. Nathaniel Towne was the first schoolmaster.

Over time, the town had two steam railroads, a trolley line and a bus route. Mills and shoe factories, the Boston Blacking Industry, Ice making and other industries soon created a thriving commerce in the town. With its many ponds and streams Middleton became a summer destination point with many cottages, camping grounds, and picnic areas in the late 1800’s and early 1900’s. Route 114 was built between 1804 and 1914 and ran right through the center of Middleton. Farmers and their horses were employed to help built this highway.

Middleton’s history has been fundamentally aligned with agriculture with a modest transition to industrialization in the 19th century. Until the 1970’s the largest source of employment in Middleton was manufacturing with most residents were employed in blue collar positions. In recent years, increased numbers of Middleton residents are college graduates working in professional positions. By 2009, 80% of the population over 25 years old had a high school degree or higher, almost 30% had a bachelor’s degree or higher and 12% had a graduate or professional degree.

According to the 2010 census the population of Middleton was 8,987 people up 16% since the year 2000. New housing developments accounted for much of the increase in population. Home sales have ranged in the mid $300,000 to the low $400,000 over the last 5 years. The average price of a home built in Middleton in June 2010 was $417,100

Over the past fifteen years the enrollment of students in grades K – 6 has increased by 23% . To deal with overcrowding in the schools at the elementary level, Middleton completed a $5,000,000 Renovation and Addition Project at the Fuller Meadow School in 1997. In 1997 the residents of Middleton also voted to spend $3,000,000 for the drafting of the architectural designs which served as the template for the enlargement and renovation of the Town's Regional High School, Masconomet, a secondary school of national renown. The High School portion of this expansion project was completed in 2001 and the Middle School renovation was completed in 2002. The connecting hall, playing fields and parking lot were completed in 2003. For many years the Masconomet graduating class has had 90% of its graduates go on to higher education. In 2008 the town supported the renovation and expansion of the Flint Public Library. Just this year-- 2011, the town completed a new larger Howe-Manning Elementary School. All of these projects show the town's support of higher education and learning.

The Town operates under an open town meeting form of government presided over by a Town Moderator, giving all registered voters the opportunity of an equal voice in spending their tax dollars. Subject to the legislative decisions made by the Town Meeting, the affairs of the Town are generally administered by a five-member Board of Selectmen, which in turn appoint a Town Administrator who supervises the administration of most town departments

The Town of Middleton's profile is rapidly changing from a semi-rural community to one that is attracting more retail and commercial development. Development is regulated by zoning by-laws that provide for the preservation of open space and the careful blending of residential and commercial establishments. In spite of recent development, Middleton has retained its small town character and is still a town with a warm community feeling.

Brief History of the Flint Public Library

Middleton has always been interested in maintaining a library for its citizens. As early as 1772, a social library was founded by Reverend Elias Smith. In 1838 another library association was established by Dr. E.S. Phelps with 46 members and 84 volumes but it was short-lived. The present Flint Library originated as an association formed in 1865 with John M. Peabody President. This association flourished and was turned over to the town in 1879 after the Honorable Charles L. Flint, a prominent Massachusetts citizen born in Middleton, wrote a letter to the Selectmen suggesting the 150 anniversary of incorporation of the Town should be commemorated by the establishment of a Public Town Library, free to all. Mr. Flint offered $1,000.00 to help start a library provided the Town appropriate $400 for necessary expenses.

In 1891, $10,000 was bequeathed to the town under the will of Honorable Charles L. Flint for the purposes of erecting a permanent building for use as a free public library. Following this generous donation, the Flint Public Library was built on a centrally located site in Middleton Square on land purchased by the Town to be used expressly for the construction of a library. Created of ornamental Ashler brick with Nova Scotia sandstone trimmings and a slate roof the library has an elegant and regal look. The interior finish was of cypress, with birch floors and furniture of highly polished oak. The front painted memorial windows were created by the renowned artist, Donald McDonald whose work is rare and precious. The entire book collection amounted to 5,000 volumes representing accumulations from earlier private library associations and the personal library and writings of Charles L. Flint. An early advocate of secondary and higher education, Charles L. Flint was a leading force for the establishment the University of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the public high school system. He wrote seminal works on agricultural topics and became the Secretary of Agriculture for Massachusetts. Most of his original writings reside in the library's glass cased book shelves.

Over the years, the library remained architecturally unchanged with only a 1978 renovation of its basement for a Children's Department. In the early part of the 21st century a group of dedicated citizens helped promote the expansion and renovation of the Flint Public Library, a tremendous undertaking which spanned the better part of 3 years. With successful fundraising efforts in progress, new construction soon began and the library operated from a temporary setting on Lookout Lane in Middleton. The new building was completed in 2008 and a grand rededication of the library was held on Nov. 8, 2008. The new space encompassed more than 18,000 sq ft. and was funded by grants from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, Municipal Funds, Historic Preservation Grants and private donations. The total cost of the project exceeded 7 million dollars. Presently, the library contains more than 50,000 books, 3,500 videos, 1,800 audio books, passes to local attractions, museums and subscriptions to almost 300 periodicals. The library also offer ebooks and audio books which can be downloaded from a computer to the patrons own ereader or listening device.

There are 14 computers for the public to use with high-speed Internet. Wireless Internet access is also available. Annually, the library hosts more than 100 programs dedicated to cultural, recreational or educational subjects. Story hour sessions and after-school programs are offered on a weekly basis as the library is committed to promoting reading and literacy to the community's youth. Maintaining a very close and cooperative relationship with Middleton's educational institutions, the Flint Public Library hosts school classes and supports the school summer reading requirements. The Flint also is committed to delivering library material to the elderly and homebound and works closely with the Town's Council on Aging.

The library boasts healthy circulation and attendance statistics with half of its 8,000 residents owning library cards. The library participates in a regional consortium called the Merrimac Valley Library Consortium (MVLC) wherein books at other libraries, both public and academic, can be located and borrowed by Middleton residents at no cost. The Flint Public Library makes its resources available to the community 51 hours per week.

The library is supported through the Municipality of Middleton and overseen by an elected Board of five Library Trustees, elected for a three year term and responsible for overseeing policy decisions. The day-to -day operation of the library is entrusted to the Library Director who supervises four full-time employees and seven part time employees.

Long Range Plan Methodology

The Flint Public Library's Long Range Plan was created over a period of 2 ½ years and under the guidance of two library directors. The process was based on the book by Sandra S. Nelson entitled "The New Planning for Results : a streamlined approach." published in Chicago by American Library Association, 2001. In brief, the streamlined approach consists of three meetings with a community survey sent out between the 2nd and 3rd meetings. The staff of both the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners and the Massachusetts Library System offered help through online resources and facilitating two meetings. The first session was organized by Library Director Adele Carter with assistance from Greg Pronevitz and Scott Kehoe from what was then the North-Metro Regional Library System (NMRLS) and is now the Massachusetts Library System (MLS). The group met with the Long Range Planning Committee on March 3, 2010. After introductions and an overview of the process, the committee brainstormed the Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats to the library. Included in this section is the S.W.O.T worksheet with updates in red which were added when the current committee briefly reviewed the S.W.O.T list on May 2, 2011.

After the March 3, 2010 meeting, the committee met on April 7, 2010 to visualize goals for the community and to see where the library could help support the community vision. Library Director Adele Carter and representatives from NMRLS facilitated the meeting. Attached are the (CVS) Community Vision Statements from the April 7, 2010 meeting.

In March of 2011 Melissa Gaspar began as the new Flint Public Library director and picked up the Long Range Planning Process. After attending a MLS workshop with Susan Babb on April 6, 2011, a meeting was called on May 2 to review what had been done to date and to move forward.

Ten of the 14 people invited to the meeting were able to attend. The meeting began promptly at 7pm and members introduced themselves. The committee had been sent the S.W.O.T list and preliminary goals for the library which had been created in 2010. The S.W.O.T list was updated and then the group envisioned what the library would look like in 2016. After this brainstorming session, the committee filled in a library goal worksheet to put their vision into goals which could be accomplished. Melissa collected the worksheets to be compiled later. The results of this exercise are included in this report and called "Long Range Planning Goals to Support the Community Vision" and is dated May 2, 2011.

Next the group looked over a survey which was a compilation of 11 surveys available online. The group members made additions to the survey and thought of ways to disseminate the survey to as many people as possible. Ideas included: Sending it out with the Electric bills; hand delivering it to places like Ferncroft Tower, placing printed copies at the town hall and other local areas, and posting it on our website. The meeting adjourned around 8:25pm.

The survey was sent out with the tax bills in June 2011. 2987 surveys were mailed to homes and businesses in Middleton. Another 500 or so copies of the survey were available at the town hall and the library circulation desks or hand delivered to elderly housing developments in town. By August 19, 2011 226 surveys had been returned. This represented about a 6% return of total surveys printed. The surveys represented 449 people which are about 6% of the town's population. Results from the survey are attached. At last count, 250 surveys had been returned and this represented 499 people.

On August 30th, 2011 the Long Range Planning Committee convened again to discuss the results of the survey. This was the fourth meeting of the committee.

After a lively discussion of the survey results, the committee focused on setting future goals for the Flint Public Library. The meeting was adjourned at 8:30pm. In addition, the board of trustees spent most of their August 9th meeting discussing the survey results and planning how they can help improve the library's services and programs. There was input from staff and library Friends members as well. The following list of Goals, Objectives and Activities reflects the efforts, thoughtful suggestions, enthusiastic support and hopes of many people in the community who are deeply committed to the future success of the Flint Public Library. It is an ambitious but workable plan. The Yearly Action Plan is indicated by goals which have the year 2012 next to them.

Other reasons for not using the library

Some librarians are great, others leave a lot to be desired

I get free books from friends

Library is not needed. It is an overpriced facility

My computer does it all. No need for a library

I used it when my kids were young, but not after they graduated

With Kindles and computers the library is no longer needed.

It shouldn't have been expanded.

I would use it more if I had children.

The library appears to be a day camp for children

Children say they do not like it

Assessment of User Need

After many committee discussions and a careful review of the survey results it was evident that there were some unmet needs from the community.

Primarily, the public would like to see the library be open more hours especially on weekends. Many expressed a wish that the library would continue its 51 hours of operation year round instead of having shortened hours during the summer. In order for the library to be open more hours, the town would need to fund more staff hours. Whether this will be possible in the current economic climate will be seen in the next few years.

Another frequent theme was the need for children's program for children under the age of 3. This is something we have addressed right away with the introduction of a Toddler Playgroup which includes a program of fingerplays, songs, chants, and creative movement. The first two programs have been well attended with 23 people in each group. This program will continue on a weekly basis. More programs for teens were also mentioned. We currently have a part-time YA librarian but as this is a growing field it would be so much better to have a full time position to serve the needs of the teen population. We also do not have a computer area for teens or tweens. The children's area is appropriate for younger children and the adult area is needed for adults who are taking online classes or doing research. When groups of young teens congregate there the noise level becomes a problem for the adults.

The meeting room spaces are highly used and there are often more people seeking quiet study areas than we have space for. Often the large meeting room is in demand for more than one community group or club. Scheduling programs for the library and the community is a full time job and requires much diplomacy. Many people mentioned the noise level in the library and this is something that must be addressed. The public computer area has a bit of an echo where sounds seem louder than usual.

Overall, the majority of comments were highly complementary about the staff and the library building; however the need for better signage was a common complaint. There is also a need for electrical outlets by the tables where people sit to use their laptops. Outlets in the nearby walls create a tripping hazard when people plug in across aisles that people frequent as they browse for books.

It was interesting to see that 95% of the people who use the library still check out books. Videos and audio books statistics however are on the rise. More people are expressing an interest in ebooks and the audio book download program Overdrive. More training and promotion is needed for the public to learn about these services.

One unexpected result from the survey was that many of the people who use the library never look at the website. Some find the website hard to navigate. Updating the website and looking at the ways we promote our programs will need to be addressed right away. We also found out that the lawn sign out front is a very successful way to promote library programs.
